More than 80 children are diagnosed with cancer each year at the Addison Jo Blair Cancer Care Center. At any given time, there are hundreds more receiving ongoing cancer treatment. For these families the hospital can be a home away from home.

Kosair Children's Hospital treats a wide range of oncology and hematology conditions and offers kidney, heart and bone marrow transplant services. Specialists in every discipline work together to ensure children receive the care they need, from oncologists and hematologists to surgeons, pathologists, respiratory therapists, rehabilitation specialists and child life therapists.

A special playroom, teen room and family room are available just for children and families in the Addison Jo Blair Cancer Care and Renal Center, helping them forget about treatment if only for a little while. Each child has access to child life therapy services for "play" therapy and distraction from procedures. A chaplain also is on hand to provide support.

As an affiliate of the Children's Oncology Group, the National Cancer Institute and the American College of Surgeons' Commission on Cancer, the center provides access to highly advanced cancer research and treatment options during the earliest stages of the disease. The high-tech yet high-touch care provided by specialists is what makes the Addison Jo Blair Cancer Care and Renal Center so special.
